THE NIGHT SKY- 4TH QUARTER 2013

Mercury: can be viewed as an evening star, hanging low in the western horizon near Saturn at the beginning of October. Later that month Mercury will have moved too close to the rays of the Sun to be easily seen. Mid-November through mid-December, Mercury reappears as a morning star. Look to the eastern horizon before sunrise on December 1st, to see the waning crescent Moon in conjunction with Mercury and Saturn.

Venus: the second-brightest object in the night skies after the Moon, Venus will be visible as the evening star throughout the 4th Quarter of 2013. The Moon will conjunct Venus on October 8th, November 6th, and December 5th.

Mars: the red planet can be viewed in the pre-dawn hours hanging low in the south-eastern quadrant at the beginning of the 4th Quarter of 2013. Every morning he will rise higher in the sky, preceding the Sun, until by year's end he will be past the zenith at sunrise. The Moon can be seen in conjunction with Mars before sunrise on October 29th, November 27th, and December 25th.

Jupiter: at the beginning of the 4th Quarter, Jupiter, the third brightest object in the heavens can be spotted near the zenith, in the early hours before sunrise. Every day he will be seen ascending slightly higher in the morning sky. By New Year's Eve, Jupiter will be rising in the east shortly after sunset and setting in the west as the Sun rises the next morning. The Moon can be viewed in conjunction with Jupiter before sunrise on October 25th, November 22nd, and December 19th.

Saturn: At the beginning of the 4th Quarter, Saturn can be viewed low in the western horizon in conjunction with Mercury. By late October Saturn will disappear into the glare of the Sun until he reappears in the morning sky mid-November through the end of the 4th Quarter. During the pre-dawn hours of December 1st, Saturn can be viewed in conjunction with the Moon.

Meteor Showers: The Draconids meteor shower will peak on the night of October 8th. The Taurids peak November 3rd; the Moon-free night could make for spectacular viewing.

Daylight Savings Time ends Sunday November 3rd. Turn clocks back one hour.

MENTAL ALCHEMY

“Not only, therefore, are all man’s physical activities determined by the thought cells and thought structures which make up his unconscious mind, his soul, or his character; but every event and circumstance that comes into his life not due to his physical actions likewise is due in large measure to the four-dimensional activities of these stellar cells and stellar structures. Thus is the thought organization of his astral body responsible both for what a man does and for the events that come into his life.

If, therefore, the habitual actions of any person are to be changed, or if his fortune in any respect—health, finances, affections, honor, or what not—is to be changed, he must alter the thought composition or thought organization of his astral body.”

Mental Alchemy—C. C. Zain

SOME MORE ALCHEMY FAVORITES

We are pleased to offer a selection of alchemical writings that were recommended reading by the presenters at our 2013 convention, The Alchemist’s Laboratory: Transforming Your Everyday Life.

Creative Visualizations

by Shakti Gawain

This self-help classic, first published in 1978, is just as valuable today as the day it was written. The author, Shakti Gawain, walks the reader through the steps of developing their creative imagination in order to create the life that they desire. This book offers practical applications for developing Directed Thinking and Induced Emotion, which lie at the core of The Brotherhood of Light Teachings.

All is Well

by Louise L. Hay and Mona Lisa Schulz

The process of Mental Alchemy teaches us how to recondition our thought cells in order to get them to work for us, rather than against us. C. C. Zain recommends the use of affirmations as one of the most powerful tools for reconditioning thought cells, thus bringing about personal transformation.

This book is geared towards transforming one’s physical health. The authors discuss the emotional centers within the body and how certain trends of thought produce stress factors contributing to disease.

The copious affirmations in this book specifically address positive thought treatments for a variety of illnesses.

The Alchemist’s Laboratory:

Edited by Vicki Brewer, Christopher Gibson and Lara Hill

This handbook for transforming your life, created for the 2013 Convention, is a distillation of the alchemical material contained in The Brotherhood of Light series written by C. C. Zain. It contains sections on each of the seven alchemical metals and their correspondences to the seven planets of classical astrology. Included are detailed descriptions of the outer planets, Uranus, Neptune and Pluto. It also contains original material by Christopher Gibson. The illustrations for alchemical metals were specially designed for this book by printmaker Murray Robertson of Glasgow, Scotland.
